

by Teresa Malcolm

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

August 15, 2019

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

Our team of copy editors reads and posts most of what you see on the websites for National Catholic Reporter and Global Sisters Report (the NCR project focusing on women religious). The Copy Desk Daily highlights recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

From Bay Area, volunteers head to El Paso: 'Time for Catholics to be Catholic.' Notices in the bulletins of St. Ignatius and St. Agnes in San Francisco brought in parishioners wanting to help refugees on the border, in a yet-unnamed but ongoing project. Members of the first team unpack their experiences in July for NCR, and the August team faced a traumatic event: Annunciation House volunteers 'on lockdown' during El Paso massacre.

Meanwhile, in Nogales, Mexico, while migrants wait on the border, sisters in Mexico welcome them daily to the 'dining room' that's a 10-minute walk south of the Mariposa Border Crossing into the United States.

At Benincasa community, a new model for religious life unfolds. Reaching millennials is not all 'nones and nuns,' Jamie Manson reports in a two-part edition of her column, Grace on the Margins.

ICYMI, words to the Leadership Conference of Women Religious: "I want sisters who will walk the streets, get close to the people, be present among both the local people and the migrants, sisters who will be able to build a bridge of understanding, enabling each group to cross over to the other." UISG director to LCWR assembly: No need to fear doing the 'small things.'

Advertisement

*Want to keep updated with the latest news from the National Catholic Reporter?
Sign up here for news updates by email — including one that will send you Copy Desk Daily every Monday through Friday.*