For our second video in our Facebook Live series, national correspondent and incoming executive editor Heidi Schlumpf interviews composer Dan Schutte about The Easter Triduum, a digital liturgical experience that he created to celebrate Holy Week in this extraordinary year. They talk in this conversation about how the series came to be and what might be next for the Catholic Church as the world recovers from the coronavirus pandemic. Schutte is an NCR board member.

Note: We had some connectivity issues while streaming this video to Facebook, so what you see here is an edited clip of the complete conversation. Thank you for your patience. We hope to bring you more conversations in the future as we all shelter in place. We wish you all a blessed Holy Week.
