

Twittering in church, with the pastor's OK

Tom Gallagher | May. 27, 2009 NCR Today

Time Magazine's newest issue (with Michelle Obama on the cover) has a very interesting article [1] about Twittering during church services

It's hard to imagine a Catholic pastor in a typical Catholic parish allowing Twittering to happen during his homily. It's a fun thought though.

By the way, I can't help but notice traditionally Catholic ethnic names in articles about Protestant churches (e.g., McDonald and McLaughlin in this article).

Source URL (retrieved on 05/29/2017 - 01:22): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/twittering-church-pastors-ok>

Links:

[1] <http://www.time.com/time/business/article/0,8599,1895463,00.html>.