

Monks, women and profits

Tom Gallagher | Jun. 2, 2009 NCR Today

The New York Times' story of a holy coming together of women and monks [1] is an uplifting employment-small business success story worth reading.

SPARTA, Wis. ? At the ringing of a bowl-shaped bell, five monks at a remote monastery congregated in the chapel here for the fourth of their seven daily rounds of prayer, their voices murmuring a Gregorian chant in Latin.

At the same time, in a nearby house on the monastery's property, the phone was ringing in a small office where two women and an office manager run a multimillion-dollar business that generates the money to run the monastery.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/22/2017 - 16:54): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/monks-women-and-profits>

Links:

[1] http://www.nytimes.com/2009/06/02/us/02monks.html?_r=1&ref=us