Last month, I found myself in the National 4H Conference Center in Chevy Chase, Md., where 230 people from 17 states and the District of Columbia were gathered to talk about eucharistic communities.

According to the organizers, intentional eucharistic communities "are those small faith communities, rooted in Catholic tradition, which gather to celebrate Eucharist on a regular basis. Through sharing liturgical life and mutual support for one another, members are strengthened to live Gospel-centered lives characterized by spiritual growth and social commitment."

I found groups of people Carving out a spiritual home [1]. Read the full story.
