

Published on National Catholic Reporter (<https://www.ncronline.org>)

June 29, 2009 at 8:25am

Michael Jackson

by Dennis Coday

NCR Today

Hat tip to Angela Cave over on the Catholic News Service blog for finding an article Michael Jackson wrote for Belief.net in 2000.

It really is worth a read. Pain is evident in what he wrote. At age 8 and 9 as the Jackson Five were just emerging, Jackson writes, "at that time what I wanted more than anything else were the two things that make childhood the most wondrous years of life, namely, playtime and a feeling of freedom." He wanted build a tree house and go to a roller skating party, he said. "But very early on, this became impossible."

There was one day a week, however, that I was able to escape the stages of Hollywood and the crowds of the concert hall. That day was the Sabbath. So, in my world, the Sabbath was the day I was able to step away from my unique life and glimpse the everyday.

Sundays were my day for "Pioneering," the term used for the missionary work that Jehovah's Witnesses do. We would spend the day in the suburbs of Southern California, going door to door or making the rounds of a shopping mall, distributing our Watchtower magazine. I continued my pioneering work for years and years after my career had been launched.

... When I was young, my whole family attended church together in Indiana. ... When circumstances made it increasingly complex for me to attend, I was comforted by the belief that God exists in my heart, and in music and in beauty, not only in a building. But I still miss the sense of community that I felt there -- I miss the friends and the people who treated me like I was simply one of them. Simply human. Sharing a day with God.

Fellow NCR Today blogger Sr. Rose Pacatte wrote about Hollywood Mourning and the Australia Jeusit magazine Eureka Street has a quite fine reflection, Michael Jackson's tragic gift, by Tim Kroenert the assistant editor.

Advertisement

Source URL (retrieved on 06/21/2018 - 12:09am): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/michael-jackson>

Links:

[1] <https://www.ncronline.org/node/160616>