

Dog days of summer?

Thomas C. Fox | Jul. 16, 2009 NCR Today

"Dog days" refer to the hottest, most sultry days of summer when heat saps energy and little seems to happen. Not this year. Not from a news point of view.

As we reach the mid-point of the tradition summer season, July 15, we were still digesting a new papal encyclical and the historic meeting between President Obama and Pope Benedict.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the Senate Judiciary committee was grilling Supreme Court nominee Sonia Sotomajor and a short distance away congressional committees were busy writing health care legislation likely to effect our lives for years to come.

Here's one take [1] on the importance of this moment.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/29/2017 - 01:21): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/dog-days-summer>

Links:

[1] <http://egan.blogs.nytimes.com/2009/07/15/health-cares-historic-moment/>