

CNN Calls Latinos 'Future' of the Church

Joshua J. McElwee | Oct. 21, 2009 NCR Today

CNN has posted on its homepage today an article highlighting that the future of the U.S. Catholic Church may be thoroughly Latino.

The article cites a new study by the Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life that claims that one-third of all Catholics in the U.S. are now Latino.

Some of the consequences of this shift in demographics are explored. Things like the replacing of the traditional fish meal during Lent with chile rellenos and the need for parishes to expand the availability of Spanish language masses. Take a look. [1]

Source URL (retrieved on 07/21/2017 - 00:04): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/cnn-calls-latinos-future-church>

Links:

[1] <http://www.cnn.com/2009/LIVING/wayoflife/10/21/lia.browning.catholic.church/index.html>