

Many faiths unite in facing horror in Haiti

Thomas C. Fox | Jan. 17, 2010 NCR Today

"Port-Au-Prince has become a kind of multidenominational, open-air church [1]. Tens of thousands live in the street together, scraping for food and water, sharing their misery and blending their spirituality."

"It doesn't mean anything if Satan hates me, because God loves me," sing the women at Jeremy Square, their faces almost invisible in the darkness of this powerless, shattered downtown. "God has already paid my debt."

---

Source URL (retrieved on 05/27/2017 - 16:43): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/many-faiths-unite-facing-horror-haiti>

Links:

[1] http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/34903373/ns/world\_news-washington\_post/