Theologian Fr. Hans Küng has written a letter [1] to the world's bishops. (I found it on the web site of the Irish Times, but it carries a New York Times Syndicate tag line.) He begins: "On the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the election of Pope Benedict XVI, I am making this appeal to you [the world's bishops] in an open letter. In doing so, I am motivated by my profound concern for our church, which now finds itself in the worst credibility crisis since the Reformation. ... "

"I want only to lay before you six proposals that I am convinced are supported by millions of Catholics who have no voice in the current situation.

1. Do not keep silent ...
2. Set about reform ...
3. Act in a collegial way ...
4. Unconditional obedience is owed to God alone ...
5. Work for regional solutions ...
6. Call for a council ...
