

Shame Watch: Deal Hudson Attacks DREAM Act

Michael Sean Winters | Nov. 24, 2010 | Distinctly Catholic

Of all the things to give thanks for this Thanksgiving, it is strange enough that Deal Hudson is giving thanks [1] for the Tea Party, a group dedicated to, well, at the very least, dedicated to the kind of hyper-individualism and anti-government thinking that has little or no resonance with Catholic Social Teaching.

But, it is just shy of unforgivable that one of the examples he gives of the kind of government initiatives the Tea Party is set to eliminate is the DREAM Act, which would grant citizenship to children brought here by their parents without proper documents provided they serve in the U.S. military or go to college. He seems especially exercised at the thought that such students would receive lower in-state tuition costs. If only the poor kids had the foresight to be born in McClean, Virginia rather than in Mexico.

Shame on you Deal.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/23/2017 - 17:25): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/shame-watch-deal-hudson-attacks-dream-act>

Links:

[1] <http://www.insidecatholic.com/feature/a-tea-party-thanksgiving.html>