

More Marshall on Gingrich

Joe Feuerherd | Mar. 9, 2011 NCR Today

Josh Marshall of the must-read [Talking Points Memo \[1\]](#) website picks up where he left off on Hardball last night. The "...the pattern with Gingrich shows a level of hypocrisy, cruelty and emotional immaturity that most people won't accept in a president," he writes.

I'm not so sure. The good news for Gingrich is that he doesn't, at least early on, need the votes of "most people." Instead, in a crowded Republican field he needs a plurality of votes, or a vote count that "exceeds expectations," in the early contests of Iowa, New Hampshire and South Carolina. Given the weakness of the Republican field, and given Gingrich's ambitions, that's a bet well worth making.

Source URL (retrieved on 06/22/2017 - 07:08): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/more-marshall-gingrich>

Links:

[1] http://www.talkingpointsmemo.com/archives/2011/03/just_no_hope.php#more?ref=fpblg