

Rick Garnett in USA Today

Michael Sean Winters | Apr. 25, 2011 | Distinctly Catholic

Notre Dame law professor Rick Garnett has an op-ed at USA Today [1] about the upcoming Supreme Court case on the ministerial exception for civil rights laws. This is a dicey subject but I mostly agree with Garnett. Too often secular liberals warn that any public pronouncements by religiously motivated leaders risks dismantling the deparation of Church and State, a position that is mostly nonsense. But, this really is a case of separation of Church and State and, as Garnett rightly argues, the First Amendment's guarantee of religious freedom should be upheld broadly by the Court.

---

Source URL (retrieved on 05/30/2017 - 03:00): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/rick-garnett-usatoday>

Links:

[1] <http://www.usatoday.com/news/opinion/forum/2011-04-24-Hosanna-Tabor-and-Supreme-Court.htm?loc=interstitialskip>