

John Carr on Pope John Paul II & Workers

Michael Sean Winters | May. 3, 2011 | Distinctly Catholic

John Carr of the USCCB is one of the few people on the planet I would jump in front of a train to save. I can think of few individuals in Washington who have done more, over a longer period of time, to defend the poor and the vulnerable and to spread the Church's social teachings than he. At the USCCB media blog, he has a very intelligent essay [1] on John Paul II and the late pontiff's defense of workers.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/28/2017 - 21:19): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/john-carr-pope-john-paul-ii-workers>

Links:

[1] <http://usccbmedia.blogspot.com/2011/04/john-paul-ii-pope-for-workers.html>