

Published on National Catholic Reporter (<https://www.ncronline.org>)

May 5, 2011 at 6:19am

---

Bp Morris: 'You've got to stand in your truth.'

by Tom Roberts by Joshua J. McElwee

Fr Jim Cronin (left) and Bishop Bill Morris (right) blessing symbols of Baptism during the Mass opening the Fifth Diocesan Gathering July 12, 2010 in St Patrick's Cathedral Centre, Toowoomba, Australia. The theme of the gathering was "Church in the Third Millennium: Ministry, Mission and Maintenance."

The Advent Pastoral Letter of 2006, cited as the beginning of the controversy that resulted in the recent forced retirement of Australian Bishop William Morris, deals primarily with plans to provide diocesan leadership in a future with dwindling access to the Eucharist and priests.

In the letter, Morris informed local Catholics that, as things stood at the time, by 2014 his rural diocese of Toowoomba would have only six priests 65 years and younger in parish-based ministry, with three aged 61-65, and eight 66-70.

In diocesan ministry in 2014, Morris projected two priests 65 and younger; two priests 66-70 and a bishop in the 71-75 age range.

Morris, who had been the bishop of Toowoomba for 18 years, was forced to retire May 1.

Having stated that background, he penned the paragraphs that apparently have caused him to lose his job:

“Given our deeply held belief in the primacy of Eucharist for the identity, continuity and life of each parish community, we may well need to be much more open towards other options for ensuring that Eucharist may be celebrated. As has been discussed internationally, nationally and locally the ideas of:

- “Ordaining married, single or widowed men who are chosen and endorsed by their local parish community;
- “Welcoming former priests, married or single, back to active ministry;
- “Ordaining women, married or single;
- “Recognizing Anglican, Lutheran and Uniting Church Orders.

“We remain committed to actively promoting vocations to the current celibate male priesthood and open to inviting priests from overseas.”

Meanwhile, in an on-camera video accounts to emerge from Toowoomba, Morris admitted he may have stepped on “too many toes” when he suggested in the 2006 pastoral that his rural diocese might benefit from the Vatican considering the ordination of women and married men.

But, the bishop -- whose diocese contains 68,000 Catholics in 35 parishes, with 16 active priests -- continues: “You’ve got to stand in your truth.”

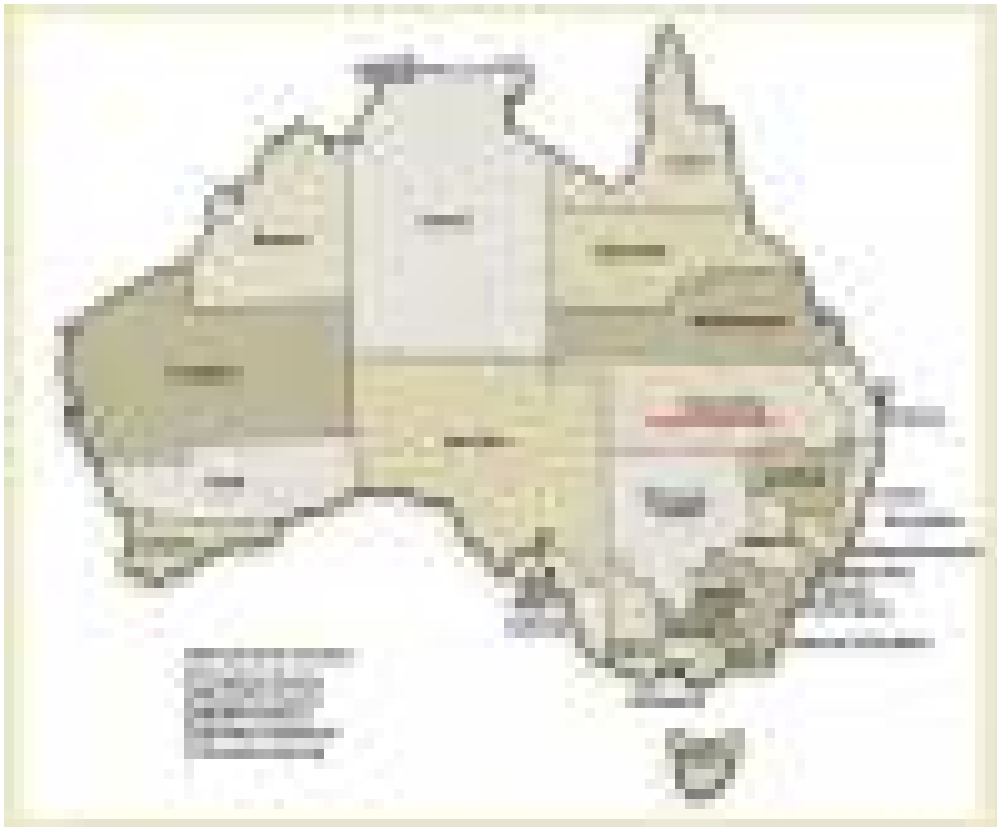

The bishop’s comments came during interviews for two television news reports by Australia’s ABC News, which were posted to its Web site May 4.

In one of the ABC reports, Morris is seen walking around his diocesan office, taking books from his bookshelves and placing them into boxes.

Advertisement

Speaking to a question on whether there might be a process for him to appeal his forced retirement, the bishop answers: “It’s only now that most of us, as bishops, found out there is no process for bishops. We didn’t know that before.”

Morris also said he had a private meeting with Pope Benedict XVI on the issue and it was not fruitful: “You don’t get much debate. He has a view and you have a view and you kind of part on those views.”

Also interviewed in one broadcast report Brisbane Archbishop John Bathersby said he wished the ouster hadn't happened.?

The visibly shaken archbishop said he recognized a tension between his love for the church and confusion about the move. ?The church makes mistakes, has made mistakes, but I love the church. It's simple like that.?

In a May 3 interview with the Brisbane Times, Morris told a reporter the Vatican investigated him for being ?too open? and ?too inclusive? in his approach. He said he was not advocating any of the alternatives listed in his letter, but rather pointing to the debate that was going on throughout the church.

Morris' ouster has prompted public support for the bishop from a wide range of organizations, including the National Council of Priests of Australia, the country's Vincentian province, the Brisbane Times, and the U.S. Women's Ordination Conference.

The full text of the pastoral letter can be found here.

Tom Roberts is NCR editor at large. His email address is [troberts@ncronline.org. Joshua J. McElwee is an NCR staff writer. His e-mail address is jmcelwee@ncronline.org.]

---

More of NCR's coverage of the ouster of Bishop William Morris:

- Forced retirement is message to all bishops, Morris says, by Tom Roberts, May 10.
- A long-simmering tension over 'creeping infallibility', a background piece by John Allen, May 9.
- Bp Morris: 'You've got to stand in your truth.', Tom Roberts and Josh McElwee, May 5
- Bishop's firing makes pope's priorities clear, an NCR editorial, May 4
- Support for ousted Australian bishop widens, Tom Roberts, May 4
- Australian priests offer support for deposed bishop, Tom Roberts, May 3
- Women's ordination group responds to bishop's ouster, Women's Ordination Conference, May 3
- Pope removes bishop who expressed openness to ordaining women, CNS, May 2

Source URL (retrieved on 08/18/2017 - 03:42): <https://www.ncronline.org/news/accountability/bp-morris-you-ve-got-stand-your-truth>

Links:

[1] <https://www.ncronline.org/donate?clickSource=article-end>