

Episcopal church in Bladensburg to convert to Roman Catholic parish

Zoe Ryan | Jun. 6, 2011 NCR Today

The Washington Post today reports [1]:

An Episcopal church in Bladensburg has decided to become the first in the Washington area -- and one of the first in the country -- to convert to a Roman Catholic parish, the Episcopal Diocese of Washington announced Monday.

St. Luke's, a small, tightknit congregation founded in 1895, had been thinking about becoming Roman Catholic since 2009. Last year, in the wake of a remarkable bid by the Vatican to reach out to disaffected Anglicans, it made an overture to the Catholic Archdiocese of Washington.

Read more here [1].

Source URL (retrieved on 07/24/2017 - 12:18): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/episcopal-church-bladensburg-convert-roman-catholic-parish>

Links:

[1] http://www.washingtonpost.com/local/episcopal-church-in-bladensburg-to-convert-to-roman-catholic-parish/2011/06/06/AGLsiIKH_story.html