

New missal not the end-all, be-all in Denver

John L. Allen Jr. | Nov. 29, 2011 NCR Today

I went to Mass on Nov. 28 at a parish in suburban Denver, which by local standards would be considered a fairly meat-and-potatoes place -- neither liberal nor conservative, basically nonaligned when it comes to most matters of church politics.

There, the introduction of the new missal on Sunday amounted to a non-event. People followed along and said their parts, without any ferment. There was some chuckling over stumbles at unfamiliar parts, but in general, there was neither overt resistance nor palpable enthusiasm -- simply people trying to adjust.

Chatting briefly with Mass-goers afterwards, I heard several versions of what I would label the "common sense" perspective on liturgical matters. In different ways, most people -- whatever they thought of the new language -- said that the things that really matter in shaping the quality of their liturgical experience boil down to three points: How good the preaching is, how good the music is and how welcoming the community seems.

If those three things are in place, they said, the most defective translation in the world won't prevent them from coming back. Conversely, if those three things are off, even the Platonic ideal of a translation won't get them in the door.

The consensus seemed to be that at the grassroots, most Catholics wish the church would devote even a fraction of the time and energy it's poured into debates over translation to the things that really strike ordinary people as decisive: preaching, music, and community spirit.

Perhaps the problem, as one mother of three told me, is that those things can't be shaped from behind a desk or in a committee room, while translations can. Her message to church leaders? "If you think this is what matters, you need to get out more often."

Stories on the new Roman missal translation

- New missal could drive away Catholics at California parish [1]
- Washington parish meets missal with confusion, resignation [2]
- New Jersey parishioners take new missal in stride [3]
- California cathedral meets new missal with indifference [4]
- Detroit priest offers insight to new missal [5]
- New missal translation subtly moves church away from Vatican II [6]
- Review of new missal mixed in St. Louis parishes [7]
- New missal not the end-all, be-all in Denver [8]
- Is the new missal good prayer? [9]
- New Mass rites greeted with disappointment, shrugs in Virginia [10]
- New missal challenge not wholly unaccepted at St. Louis basilica [11]
- California parish prepares for new missal with weeks of explanation [12]
- New missal inspires cacophony at University of Maryland church [13]
- Los Angeles parish quietly accepts new missal translation [14]
- Maryland churchgoers say they'll 'get used to' new translation [15]
- Maryland priest tells parish new missal is 'only words' [16]
- Despite new missal, we are still people of the cup [17]
- Ohio parishioner on new missal: 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it' [18]
- At Chicago parish, some annoyed, others OK with new missal [19]

Source URL (retrieved on 05/25/2017 - 07:28): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/new-missal-not-end-all-be-all-denver>

Links:

- [1] <http://ncronline.org/node/27797/>
- [2] <http://ncronline.org/node/27798>
- [3] <http://ncronline.org/node/27799>
- [4] <http://ncronline.org/node/27801>
- [5] <http://ncronline.org/node/27800>
- [6] <http://ncronline.org/node/27815>
- [7] <http://ncronline.org/node/27816>
- [8] <http://ncronline.org/node/27817>
- [9] <http://ncronline.org/node/27865>
- [10] <http://ncronline.org/node/27864>
- [11] <http://ncronline.org/node/27819>
- [12] <http://ncronline.org/node/27820>
- [13] <http://ncronline.org/node/27835>
- [14] <http://ncronline.org/node/27837>

- [15] <http://ncronline.org/node/27838>
- [16] <http://ncronline.org/node/27863>
- [17] <http://ncronline.org/node/27862>
- [18] <http://ncronline.org/node/27861>
- [19] <http://ncronline.org/node/27839>