

Connecticut repeals death penalty

Tom Gallagher | Apr. 25, 2012 NCR Today

The Huffington Post reports [1]:

Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy (D) signed a bill into law on Wednesday that repeals the death penalty, making Connecticut the 17th state to do so. The new law does not apply to the 11 inmates currently on death row in the state.

"With Governor Malloy's action, Connecticut joins sixteen other states that have already concluded that the death penalty is too risky, too expensive, and too arbitrary to continue," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Death Penalty Information Center, an advocacy group that opposes capital punishment.

"By replacing the death penalty with a sentence of life without parole, Connecticut officials have reduced the risk of executing the innocent and freed up taxpayer dollars for other programs that prevent crime more effectively and better serve victims' families."

Source URL (retrieved on 05/23/2017 - 13:59): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/connecticut-repeals-death-penalty>

Links:

[1] http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2012/04/25/connecticut-repeals-death-penalty_n_1453331.html