

Priest who taught others how to live dies

Tom Gallagher | Apr. 26, 2012 NCR Today

Fr. Everett Hemann, 66, has died after a yearlong struggle with pancreatic cancer.

I have periodically [1] blogged [2] about Hemann, who was publicly sharing his final days on this earth.

According to The Des Moines Register [3], Hemann died this past Tuesday:

The widespread influence of a Catholic priest who made public his process of dying over the past year in sermons, lectures, blogs and a newspaper column will be evident again on Monday in Cedar Falls.

Rev. Everett Hemann died at age 66 on Tuesday evening, a little more than a year after he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer. His funeral service Monday at St. Patrick Catholic Church in Cedar Falls is expected to be packed with Iowans honoring a man who urged them to live a full life, serve others and embrace death.

Source URL (retrieved on 06/28/2017 - 21:23): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/priest-who-taught-others-how-live-dies>

Links:

[1] <http://ncronline.org/node/27468>

[2] <http://ncronline.org/node/29729>

[3] <http://www.desmoinesregister.com/article/20120426/NEWS/120426023/0/NEWS/?odyssey=nav%7Chead>