

The latest on Vatican scandals

John L. Allen Jr. | May. 27, 2012

Ettore Gotti Tedeschi, president of the Vatican bank, was fired May 24. (CNS photo/Alessandro Bianchi, Reuters)

To say that the Vatican seems in turmoil would be putting things mildly, with two stunners in the arc of twenty-four hours last week: The announcement that the president of the Vatican Bank has been unceremoniously fired, and the revelation that a longtime personal servant of Benedict XVI has been identified as the alleged "deep throat" behind the torrid Vatican leaks scandal.

Read more by John Allen:

Memo explaining why Vatican Bank head was fired [1]

All Hell breaks loose in the Holy See [2]

More from the news wires:

Director of Vatican Bank resigns under pressure [3]

Vatican police arrest one source of leaked documents [4]

Source URL (retrieved on 05/26/2017 - 04:31): <https://www.ncronline.org/news/vatican/latest-vatican-scandals>

Links:

[1] <http://ncronline.org/node/30532>

[2] <http://ncronline.org/node/30524>

[3] <http://ncronline.org/news/vatican/director-vatican-bank-resigns-under-pressure>

[4] <http://ncronline.org/node/30516>