

Survey solicits data on changing Catholic beliefs, practices

Jamie Manson | Aug. 3, 2012 NCR Today

Patrick Hornbeck and Tom Beaudoin, two professors in the religious studies department at Fordham University, are embarking on a fascinating study of why and how people change their Catholic faith beliefs and practices.

If you would like to share your story as part of this project, below is the description from the researchers and a link to their survey:

A new study is being conducted to better understand how and why baptized Catholics make deep changes in their beliefs and practices. This research is being undertaken by researchers at Fordham University.

To find out more, please visit <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/GL85GXQ> [1].

Source URL (retrieved on 06/26/2017 - 16:43): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/survey-solicits-data-changing-catholic-beliefs-practices>

Links:

[1] <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/GL85GXQ>