

If St. Ignatius tweeted ...

Brian Roewe | Nov. 1, 2012 NCR Today

In honor of All Saints Day, Jesuit Fr. James Martin, a contributing editor at America magazine, offers a new take on the life of St. Ignatius of Loyola -- as told by tweets Ignatius himself might have scribed.

This, of course, is based on the premise such technologies had been available to the Spanish soldier-turned-spiritual leader in the 16th century, and that St. Ignatius actually would have opted to have a Twitter account.

Here's some of the highlights:

Anyone in Loyola tonight? #PARTYTIME

BUMMER! Got shot w cannonball in leg in Pamplona smackdown. Hurts like @#$$$. Getting carried back to Loyola by FRENCH guys. #NOWWHAT?

Back in Loyola w family. They're driving me nuts. Nothing to read except Lives of Saints and Life of Christ. Both boring. #BOREDOUTOFSKULL

Decided to start "Society of Jesus." Crazy huh? But we're all decided and excited about new group. Will ask Pope to approve. #MAGIS

Writing something I'm gonna call Spiritual Exercises. Dumb title? Something catchier? Old notes help. Four weeks? Going well though. #PRAY

Check out the rest of Martin's post [1] at Americamagazine.org.

Source URL (retrieved on 06/23/2017 - 08:47): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/if-st-ignatius-tweeted>

Links:

[1] http://www.americamagazine.org/blog/entry.cfm?blog_id=2&entry_id=5463