The Self-Destructiveness of Extremists

by Michael Sean Winters

Distinctly Catholic

At the New Republic, John Judis details how the extremists within the GOP are already showing themselves quite content to destroy what's left of their party. In the end, groups like the Club for Growth and their Tea Party allies will reduce their party to a bunch of bitter, angry old white men who really do not want to raise taxes. If the lessons of the last election demonstrate anything, it is that such a coalition does not fare very well in America today. And, whatever happened to compassionate conservatism?
