

'Death cafes' held for people wanting to discuss 'taboo' topic

Eloisa Perez-Lozano | Apr. 23, 2013 NCR Today

Some people refuse to talk about death, saying it is morbid and senseless to do so while one is still living. For others, however, 'death cafes' [1] offer an opportunity to talk about death in an open and candid way as well as for people to listen. It is a trend that started in England and is now coming to the United States.

Source URL (retrieved on 07/21/2017 - 00:07): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/death-cafes-held-people-wanting-discuss-taboo-topic>

Links:

[1] <http://www.religionnews.com/2013/04/15/death-cafes-normalize-a-difficult-not-morbid-topic/>