

Roman Catholics v. Hillary Rodham Clinton

Michael Sean Winters | Jun. 12, 2013 Distinctly Catholic

Over at Nineteen Sixty-Four [1], the blog of the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA), there's a quirky post about the fact that most of the potential challengers to Hillary Rodham Clinton in 2016 in both the Democratic primaries and a general election are Roman Catholics and what that fact does and does not mean.
