

The CTSA Convention: An "Outsider's" View

Michael Sean Winters | Jun. 17, 2013 Distinctly Catholic

Writing at CatholicMoralTheology.com [1], Jason King reflects on attending the recent Catholic Theological Society of America meeting, and feeling a tad more welcome than he feared, but still like something of an outsider. This is an interesting development within the Catholic theological world, young theologians with a profound desire to move past the labels that have characterized, and haunted, the theological community for too long.

Source URL (retrieved on 07/22/2017 - 18:09): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/ctsa-convention-outsiders-view>

Links:

[1] <http://catholicmoraltheology.com/ctsa-annual-meeting-reflections/>