

Traditional hymns making a comeback

Eloisa Perez-Lozano | Jul. 10, 2013 NCR Today

After the emergence and growing presence of Christian praise songs on Sunday, some modern hymn writers are looking to go retro.

According to NPR, husband-and-wife duo Keith and Kristyn Getty of Nashville, Tenn., have been working together to bring back the traditional worship hymn [1]. They believe some people might feel closer to God through more traditional-sounding songs.

Source URL (retrieved on 06/22/2017 - 18:16): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/traditional-hymns-making-comeback>

Links:

[1] <http://www.npr.org/2013/07/08/200013769/modern-hymn-writers-aim-to-take-back-sunday>