

Defending Wal-Mart (weakly)

Michael Sean Winters | Jul. 12, 2013 Distinctly Catholic

At CNN Money [1], Nina Easton defends Wal-Mart and blames the new minimum wage law on "unions more attuned to their own self-interest than the futures of low-income workers."

Don't you just love it when the self-interest of the corporation is applauded but the self-interest of a union is seen as the root of all evil? And, in the event, unions are trying every day to make sure there are fewer "low-income workers" even while Wal-Mart is trying to make more of them every day. If the best our economy can do by the poor folk of DC is Wal-Mart, maybe we should not be questioning the unions. Maybe we should be questioning everything.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/30/2017 - 02:23): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/defending-wal-mart-weakly>

Links:

[1] <http://features.blogs.fortune.cnn.com/2013/07/11/will-unions-succeed-in-driving-wal-mart-and-1800-jobs-from-dc/>