

Egypt's Young People on What They've Learned

Michael Sean Winters | Aug. 20, 2013 | Distinctly Catholic

Brain Barber has been working for a couple of years now with my colleague at the Institute for Policy Research & Catholic Studies, Jim Youniss, speaking with Egyptian youth about their aspirations and hopes, first during the Revolution two years ago, through the changes to the constitution and election of President Morsi, and up until the current turmoil. In this article at Zocalo [1], Barber lets the young people tell their stories.

Source URL (retrieved on 07/21/2017 - 15:33): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/egypts-young-people-what-theyve-learned>

Links:

[1] <http://www.zocalopublicsquare.org/2013/08/16/what-the-young-people-of-tahrir-square-learned/ideas/nexus/>