

The Pope Francis Effect?

Michael Sean Winters | Aug. 21, 2013 Distinctly Catholic

This week, in advance of Labor Day, the USCCB Media Blog is running a series of guest posts on income inequality. It may not be a "fortnight" but I will take it.

This one from Bishop Robert McElroy [1], auxiliary of San Francisco, gives evidence that not every bishop in the U.S. is grumbling about Pope Francis!

And this one from Fr. Clete Kiley [2], America's outstanding labor priest, calls attention to the importance of unions and is also worth the read.

Good stuff from 4th Street! Let's keep it up.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/24/2017 - 22:57): <https://www.ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/pope-francis-effect>

Links:

[1] <http://usccbmedia.blogspot.com/2013/08/pope-francis-and-economic-inequality.html>

[2] <http://usccbmedia.blogspot.com/2013/08/labor-day-reflection-income-inequality.html>