Are the Dems sunk this year?

by Michael Sean Winters

Alex Sink was widely expected to win the special election in Florida's 13th District yesterday. Republican operatives even admitted that her opponent, David Jolly, was running a Keystone Cops-quality campaign. Still, she lost and Jolly won. The Democrats need to seriously figure out how they can avoid this coming November's midterms from turning into a defeat of epic proportions. Hint: Defend the ACA but run as far from Obama as you can.
